

ON THE TRAIL OF BLACK HAND GANG

Dead Man Hunt Found Alfano in Sicily, According to a Telegram Received in New York.

New York, June 9.—For the first time since the assassination of Labor leader Joseph Petrosino, the New York police are convinced that they are on the track of the murderer, or at least of the man who planned the killing, as a result of a cable received from Rome. The man suspected is Emilio Alfano, who was arrested in this city by Petrosino and Detective Bull on April 17, 1927. Alfano was deported, and following a sensational trial and sentence of life imprisonment, fled.

It is believed that a day or two before Petrosino's death he had telegraphed to Chief of Police of Naples that he had found information which would enable him to arrest him. With this information the Italian detectives are firm in the belief that the Camorra learned of the telegram, possibly through a spy in the police department, and planned Petrosino's death.

It was recalled yesterday that when Alfano's deportation was ordered, and he set sail under heavy guard from here, he swore he would kill Petrosino.

Would Kill Petrosino, He Said.

"If I escape the gallows or imprisonment I will kill Petrosino," he said. "And even if I don't there are plenty of others to take his command. Petrosino will pay for this, not today, not tomorrow, but some day. Petrosino died in vain, and his threats, smiled when told Alfano's threat."

"They all talk like that," he answered, "but over in Naples we have two hundred men who follow me. They've got him dead to rights and there's nothing to stop them from saving him."

But later there came the report of Alfano's escape from prison, and after he was sentenced, and of his renewed activities as leader of the Camorra.

This was one of the Italian criminals Petrosino had in mind when he landed in Palermo to cooperate with the authorities there in running down the leaders of the Black Hand.

When Petrosino arrived in Italy he had more than 500 records of Italian criminals who either deported or were operating on the other side, any one of whom would happily bribe at sending him to jail in exchange for the opportunity offered. Of all the Black Handers he had in mind, however, none would be quick to seek revenge on Petrosino, the detective said yesterday.

Alfano Trapped Here.

It was on the night of April 17, 1927, that Petrosino was killed. Alfano is a Sicilian, under No. 10 Mulberry street, which had been the headquarters in New York of the Camorra. The Black Hand had been usually active in New York since Humphrey ordered a roundup of racketeers and revolver carrying Italians. Petrosino and Botti's quest for weapon carriers led them to the Camorra. Humphrey ordered they found a dozen men heavily armed. Among them was Alfano, whom Petrosino quickly recognized as the Camorra leader.

Alfano absolutely denied his identity and not until he was taken to police headquarters and shown with his picture and records from Italy did he waken and admit that he was the man.

The Italian government was called of the arrest and Alfano, who had fled to avoid deportation. A long legal fight ensued, but in the end Alfano was sent back. There was a great sensation in Italy upon the receipt of the news of the apprehension, and much rejoicing in Naples, the scene of his many crimes.

For ten years he was the brains of the Camorra, and hundreds of crimes, ranging from murder by proxy to racketeering, were directed by him. A criminal of the highest caliber, he joined the Camorra in his youth, and from the top and was looking upon as a mighty leader before he was out of the top. The crime was committed and bragged of to his fellow criminals were the most prominent of the league—they seemed nothing he wasn't capable of in the line of crime. When he finally became the recognized leader of the Camorra he ruled with an iron hand, and persecuted the most atrocious crimes. He before him to the blood-thirsty criminals in the line. So powerful and feared that the Camorra was under his rule that it wasn't long before the entire nation was in alarm. Judges, members of the cabinet, senators and politicians, to say nothing of the police, finally concluded that it would be far better to stand by the murderer than to make an attempt to check his reign of terror. And so Alfano, who by many in Italy was looked upon as more powerful than the king, became a hero.

Killed His Chief Rival.

One day Alfano met Andrea Cuccia, a noted tenor, and his wife and child. They became his friends and the Camorra leader persuaded Cuccia to join the "league."

Criminally bent, the singer became a member of the Camorra, and with him came his talents and accomplishments that placed him high above Alfano, he was a rival.

He planned frauds, thefts and murders with more cunning and success than Alfano, and with the aid of the doct's demands more than he could handle.

One day Alfano and Cuccia were in a bitter rivalry sprang up between the two men.

Alfano would not yield the leadership from Cuccia, and the Camorra chief decided to kill him.

TRAVELLER REPLIES TO CRITICS

Geese North by Water, Snow Having Disappeared in Edmonton.

In the Canada West Magazine for June appears a letter from a man not a stranger to newspaper print, Mr. V. Hamilton, writer of the article, editing an editorial which appeared in the same magazine for April, which was devoted to the article. Mr. Hamilton's remarkable utterances as being due to the "vicious" nature of the "fakery."

Mr. Hamilton seems to have suffered considerable mental pain from the editorial recently directed towards him. He is now in the hands of the "fakery" editors. Readers of the Herald will recall an article which appeared in this paper at the time Mr. Hamilton passed through Montreal, westward bound, calling attention to the rather obvious fact that the parietal brand of bluntness to which Mr. Hamilton refers was by no means an innocent denunciation. Just previous to the appearance of the article just mentioned, the Herald published an interview given by Mr. Hamilton to the Montreal Star, in which he stated that he was in the hands of the "fakery" editors.

In the letter reproduced below Mr. Hamilton says special emphasis upon the fact that Canadian newspapers published statements concerning his trip to the Canadian West.

The letter, dated at Edmonton, on June 10, and headed "A Square Deal for Mr. Hamilton," is as follows:

"A friend here in Edmonton has been kind enough to send me a copy of the West for April, entitled, 'Canada Fakery,' in which some of the most unkind and unfair parodies of my trip to the Canadian West.

"Considering that many of these parodies are 'fakery,' and that my trip was wholly for purely unauthorised purposes, I am not surprised that the writer of the editorial in question has been so kind as to send me a copy of the same.

"I have not been made to believe anything, nor was I 'sent south' by anyone. The trip is being made on my own responsibility, and without entering into details I may assure you that I have had access to ample sources of reliable information, without having to consult any of the class of writers who, with reference to Canada, by the way, is not entirely wrong, but, since, during my trip, I have been made to believe that I have been 'sent south' by anyone, I am not surprised that the writer of the editorial in question has been so kind as to send me a copy of the same.

for use for the 'degs and mowhies' later on; and perhaps even the 'tabloid' (ie, milled milk and sweet cheese) (ie, the choice of which comes) (ie, I have no excuse to make any) and come again.

"The above is written in the belief that your clever and untrammeled publication would not intentionally lead itself to misrepresentation of the honest purposes of a 'visitor' in the way of investigation through that interesting northern wilderness lying beyond the farthest fringe of civilization.

"Possibly you will wish to make some explanation to your readers so that they will know that the 'Canada Fakery' from which I have suffered must have been the newspaper writers of Canada-West's own country."

ARMAMENT AND PEACE.

Lord Milner restates the common doctrine that armed peace is the only peace possible, that standing armies and powerful fleets alone retain the nations from flying at each other's throats. Given that all other nations are armed it would be manifest folly for one to neglect the means of defence. The peace of each undoubtedly under such circumstances depends on its ability, or believed ability, to assert its rights and defend its possessions by force of arms.

But this is a long way from saying that armies and navies are a necessity, that they could not be generally abolished with better security for all nations and with general advantage to all. The role of the policeman and the soldier are far different, though so often regarded as analogous. The policeman parades among the people he is expected to keep in order; the soldier seldom or never sees them except in the field. The policeman is paid to quell the turbulent spirit who usually form a comparatively small proportion of the community; the soldier is supposed to be ready, willing and able to fight all creatures given the word. The business of one is to preserve the peace, that of the other to wage war.

It will take a lot of argument to prove that an unarmed people, however numerous, among unarmoured nations would be more likely to fly into war than a nation whose people see daily the soldiers and ships that are their weapons of war. An unarmed nation seldom commits murder. Few men maintain their passion long enough to go home and get a divorce. It is the fellow who carries a revolver in his pocket and is prepared to shoot on the impulse who provides a victim for the scaffold or the gallows. The sight of their well-trained army or powerful fleet of warships is surely more likely to arouse than to allay the martial spirit of a people. If no nation were prepared for war there would be no danger of war. While peace is preparing all must be prepared, but none the less the interests of all lie in having none prepared.

Lord Bessborough admitted the other day that the wholesale advertisement of Britain's naval power and the building activity had aroused German mistrust, and that this in turn had brought back upon Britain the necessity, or supposed necessity, of building still more ships. Several European nations have reached the state of mind of the man who parades about with a chip on his shoulder and vites some one to knock it off and suffer the consequences. Bravado may be the best means of making one's power known, but the construction and increase are paralleled with a host of other things that certainly do not provoke terror in the neighboring world. And usually the terror results in the effort power laying down more levels or raising more resources. The argument in Europe may be maintained purely for defence and intended to secure the peace, but no unbiased observer would ever suspect it from the attitudes of the powers toward each other.

One objection to Canada contributing a battleship or the equivalent in cash to the British navy is that Canada should not for Imperial and national reasons join this game of cat-and-mouse. We expect some day to be a powerful nation, but we are far from being a powerful nation at the moment. It is a military intervention of the kind that the world has seen in the past and proper to prepare to defend ourselves against our own means and necessities. It is a matter of honor that all the world should understand where our sympathies, and if need be our men, money and ships would be in a war in which the supremacy of Britain was involved. But it is of equal importance that we do not assume hostile attitudes toward people larger than ourselves. To do so might cost the Empire more than it could gain. It is a matter of honor that our nations would not to and bring upon ourselves a lesson we need not learn from experience. Any military or naval preparations that we make should be understood to be strictly as a matter of defence. It being always understood that while we will not help to provoke ourselves, if quarrels come there is only one side on which we can stand. Our armament should be the question of our

VARIOUS VIEWS

Montreal Star.—The railway commissioners have finally ordered the railways to build a viaduct for their entrance into Toronto. The alternative plan of subway proposed by the railways, was pronounced entirely inadequate. This is a satisfactory decision to a long discussion; and it is expected to be a saving time and money in useless dispute when we could be saving time and property by hurrying through the construction of the one feasible plan. It is a comfort to have a board of railway commissioners which will study these questions with an eye single to the public welfare and which is not at all in awe of the stupendous railway expenditures or its expense. We are laying the foundations of a much better and more efficient line to make them broad and firm enough.

THE UNTHINKABLE.

Montreal Witness.—The attempt of Mr. Balfour to get Mr. Aquilino to declare whether he counted the United States in or not when calculating the manpower standard was an unfair one. It was one which Mr. Balfour himself had been premier, would have enjoyed leaving off in many political and social circles. The Hansard, some of which would have said anything. What good could possibly come of publishing the United States a possible enemy? Mr. Aquilino would probably have answered that an impossible enemy had for the chance that such a remark might have unfortunate results. But surely the golden age has come in the world of international relations. The United States and Great Britain can count on never coming to blows, and thus putting the clock of the century and imperiling the second century of Christianity and the world no longer worthy of war. Denmark has been having a debate upon her armaments, and still holds fortresses and train soldiers. These are present dangers of nations, and it might be singular to leave them off. There are the god-damn industrial and farmer, as there are in other countries. There is also the danger of a small mischief still for idle hands to do. But all parties are agreed that Denmark should not get a divorce, and must depend on their good will. Yet they speak of placing lives in Denmark, and do not feel in constant terror, as the nation of having their homes harried. We in Canada live beside a nation ten times as large and have no armament or fortifications on our long boundary, yet we sleep in night-dress and our great-grandfathers, who were liable to hear the bugle at any time, and to have to go over to France to be shot. We have to trust that the war of the United States and Great Britain can. It would have been well if the British premier had responded to the purely military making inquiry in the words of Mr. Balfour: "I am not a soldier, but I am a statesman." The United States and Great Britain are unthinkably.

ECONOMIST'S TRIBUTE TO CANADA.

Montreal Herald.—Remarkable tribute is paid to Canada's financial stability in an article in the Economist. The article is by the pen of M. P. P. Levesque. As a professor of the College de Commerce, member of the Institute, M. Levesque may be said to know whereof he speaks in making his tribute. Among his well-known works are "Traite d'histoire et de pratique d'economie politique."

In his tribute in the Economist, Professor Levesque says that while the United States, Canada led last year the rebound of the American crisis. However, the culture, the industry, the much less industrial. Canada did not give any of these exaggerations into which speculative speculation dragged her neighbors of the south. Loans and the distribution of capital were less excessive, and the shock was also not so heavy. It was felt, however, and the trace of it is marked not only in the foreign trade statistics in which imports diminished to the same degree as in the United States, and in which exports there were slightly affected, but also in the receipts of the Treasury. In addition, the Canadian Minister of Finance, Mr. Fildes, stated to the House that the receipts for the course of the fiscal year which had finished on the 31st of March did not amount to more than $84,000,000 as compared with $100,000,000 for the preceding year—a fall of nearly twelve per cent. One must compare the Canadian situation with that of the United States, which is a country of a million and a half, in fact, as compared with a million and a half. None the less, this diminution shows the severity of the crisis in Canada. The government, however, its policy of reducing expenditures, prepared to do so. The latter for 1919-1920 at $25,000,000, less than the original estimate of 1919-1920. The proposed reduction in the budget for the coming year is 1920-1921, which came to a close a month ago. It is considered by some that this is a conservative estimate of a new country like Canada to practice such a policy. The public service may be developed year by year to keep them in line with the general expansion. But making no more important to a new country than the weight of taxation, and it seems to us that the Canadian Government at was entirely right in wishing to avoid it. It is

CORRESPONDENCE

A NOTE OF WARNING.

Dear Mr. Editor.—In view of the fact that the circus men will soon be in evidence in Alberta, allow me to call the attention of the readers of your paper to a blatant violation of the laws of our land, as well as of the laws of decency, by one of the circuses, and reported to me from two different places last summer. A note of warning is early in order. At Watkinson, High River, and possibly other places as well, one of the side shows, after the manner of the company, had as its attraction a nude woman. Our local people in High River, however, are not so easily deceived as to the nature of the principal actors in connection with this show. The management became wise, and sufficient evidence was not obtainable. While this is the Far West, we wish those showmen to understand that in our country, such exhibitions are not only deeply suppressed, and such indecency, if practiced this year, will be met with the most drastic measures possible.

Let local leagues constitute themselves a vigilance committee and bring to justice the heads in human form who are guilty of such Satanic practices.

SPORTING NEWS

BASEBALL

To-night at 6.30 the West End will play the North End in a Junior League match on the Third street grounds.

Y.C.A. vs. CALIFES.

For the game with the Calcedonians on the Second street ground the Y.M.C.A. team will line up as follows: Goal, Chown; backs, Alton and Short; half-backs, Stockedell and Peterson; Clarke; forwards, Tyndal, Grant, Moore, Lloyd, and Drayton. Spares—Cross, Crauman and Ent.

LACROSSE.

The news that Calgary contemplated backing out of the lacrosse tournament on the ground that expenditure would be too great with only two teams in the league, has thrown the devotees of our great national game into a state of righteous indignation and no wonder, when A. J. Macdonald, president of the Calgary Lacrosse Club, the Edmonton boys' positive assurance that even were there only two teams this year, Calgary would be to go ahead and play senior lacrosse. On the strength of this, locals organized a league club, bought uniforms and sticks and set about practicing with a wall. They have been practicing for a month and so far as many as twenty-six have attended practice.

Just when it was thought that arrangements were about completed for the first game, word comes that L. Hicks, president of the Calgary lacrosse club, has declared that there will be no senior league this year. The Strathcona team had decided to organize a league club.

Dr. Hicks had better put on his thinking cap and puzzle out what will happen to senior lacrosse in this province if it is dropped for a whole season. Edmonton is ready to go.

NEWS WORTH READING! NEWS WORTH STUDYING!

Our Saturday Sales are proving of immense popularity. They have already gained a name for genuineness and reliability; that is the secret of our success. Again we are going to make this sale of double interest to you, for reasons which are obvious. We have just concluded stocktaking, and all the THROW-OUT lines have been repried for sale on Saturday. In many instances certain lines of Goods can be picked up for half the price it costs the factory to turn them out; who could stay at home on Saturday and miss such a money saving opportunity as this.

We look for one of the busiest days this store has ever had on Saturday, and that is saying a good deal. So follow the crowd or better still be here before the crowd. It is the early bird that catches the worm you know.

SAW MILL FOR WOLF CREEK.

The prospective citizens, who are contemplating making of Wolf Creek something more than a town site, are soon to have the benefit of a sawmill near the town. The mill, which is being constructed by Mr. H. A. McLean, of the town, has been undertaken to construct the first sawmill west of the town. He has a timber limit in township 54 range 15, west of the fifth and will construct his mill within twenty miles of the west of Wolf Creek. Twenty miles have been set from the mill to the town, and the mill will be equipped with all the necessary machinery and building equipment. It is the expectation that the mill will very shortly be in a position to supply all the lumber required by the settlers along the Wolf Creek and McLeod rivers.
